

Become a Member

About CFAN

The Climate Finance Access Network (CFAN) is an agile, demand-driven initiative that offers a practical and actionable solution to developing countries and Direct Access Entities (DAEs) facing capacity constraints in accessing climate finance. CFAN works in developing countries with a focus on Least Developed Countries (LDCs) and Small Island Developing States (SIDS) in Africa, the Pacific, and the Caribbean. By cultivating a network of highly trained, embedded climate finance advisors who work in ministries and DAEs for a minimum period of one to two years, CFAN builds the capacity of developing countries to more quickly access climate finance and achieve climate objectives.

Who's Involved

CFAN is a global network that brings together developing countries, donor countries and institutions, and regional and international organizations.

To ensure additionality and reduce costs, CFAN partners with existing initiatives and organizations experienced in building in-country climate finance capacity. These member initiatives participate in CFAN in one of three ways:

1. Recruiting and enrolling climate finance advisors into the Network as well as managing them during their deployment
2. Supporting the design and facilitation of the CFAN advisor training and/or in-country trainings
3. Working in-country to deliver complementary services, such as technical assistance to advisors

CFAN Governance

CFAN is hosted by RMI, an independent, non-partisan, nonprofit organization serving as Network Coordinator with input from an Advisory Group and a Steering Committee. These are comprised of representatives from developing countries, donor countries and institutions, regional and international organizations, and member initiatives.

CFAN Services

Advisor training:

CFAN hosts a multimonth cohort-based training for climate finance advisors.

Advisor support in-country:

CFAN provides on-demand technical support to advisors working in-country. CFAN also maintains connections between advisors, encouraging peer-to-peer learning.

Capacity building in-country:

CFAN hosts in-country trainings for civil servants, building capacity in-country beyond the tenure of the advisor.

Network coordination:

CFAN improves coordination across existing organizations while also identifying demand for climate finance advisors, reducing duplication and ensuring additionality of services.

Become a Member

Member Initiatives

Regional Implementation Members

Regional Implementation Members contribute implementation capacity to the Network by recruiting, hiring, and enrolling qualified advisors in CFAN, as well as managing their advisors during deployment. In addition, Regional Implementation Members provide input into the development of CFAN services and programs, contribute strategic guidance, share relevant resources, and identify country demand.

Training Members

Training Members contribute technical expertise through helping design and/or host the CFAN advisor training program or in-country trainings and knowledge transfer programs. In addition, Training Members provide input into the development of CFAN services and products, provide strategic guidance, and share relevant resources.

Affiliate Members

Affiliate Members support the implementation of CFAN by offering complementary services such as technical assistance or providing input into the development of CFAN services and programs. This includes strengthening enabling environments, supporting project development, identifying and coordinating country demand for support services and advisors, and supporting the advisors and the Network to successfully structure and secure finance.

Member Initiatives

How To Join

CFAN welcomes membership from any interested organization or initiative whose scope of work aligns with the CFAN mission. To join, those interested should express their intent to participate and desired membership category in an email to info@cfanadvisors.org.